POSTAL.
[From the New-Orleans Picayune.]
Kindred Spirits.
BY E. M. ALLISON.
There is, when kindred spirits meet,
A lasting friendship born.
That no more in darkness can be set,
Than the radiant light of morn.
Though brief the hour in which they meet,
And they may meet no more,
Yet never from the soul shall fade
The impress of that hour.

And they may dwell in scenes apart,
In all things now and then,
In which, no name or thought of one,
Yet still a word—their latest tone,
May wake in both a thought,
Stirring the pulses of the heart,
With deep remembrance fraught.

And one may win his wealth and power,
In manhood's bright career,
And one, her woman's path may keep
Of solitude and prayer;
Or one might win the towering steep
Of high and dazzling fame;
But there's more of sweetness in that hour
Than in a deathless name.

The hour when kindred spirits meet,
In an hour of weal or woe,
'Tis one that over coming years Shadow or light can throw;
And though that hour may set in tears
Of anguish and despair,
Yet well each blighted spirit knows That its hour of bliss was there.

And they may mix in joyous crowds,
Where friends are to be found,
But such radiant hours no more can glow,
To gild an after hour.
For well the heart that one doth know,
That heaven hath made its own,
And the shadow of that brief, bright hour
On the life of each is thrown.

MISCELLANEOUS.
Atmospherical Electricity.
The present season has been remarkable for the number and severity of thunderstorms, the intensity of the lightning, and the amount of damage which has been sustained in consequence of them. Some localities appear to have been visited in an extraordinary manner. In Essex, Massachusetts, for instance, there have been frequent strokes of lightning which have destroyed much property, and there have been several lives lost. Whether Essex has been visited in this manner in former years, we are unable to say; but it is a fact that there are localities which have acquired a melancholy celebrity by the frequency of lightning strokes, and travelers make mention of several places where no one willingly inhabits on this account.

Prof. Levering, of Harvard University, communicates some interesting facts on the subject of atmospherical electricity, for the American Almanac. The extreme height of thunder-clouds, he says he has determined at 20,000 feet, and they sink to a distance not exceeding 1000 feet above the earth's level surface. Lightning is of three kinds, zig-zag or chain, sheet lightning and ball lightning or thunder-balls. The Professor's facts and reasoning on the whole subject of atmospherical electricity are deeply interesting, and we cannot avail ourselves of them in the space for which we are limited. Our present object is to present some statistics of destruction caused by lightning strokes, and some remarkable phenomena attending them.

We have already alluded to the frequency of lightning strokes in Essex the present year. Here are some facts of that frequency in certain places in times past. Many speaks of a tower so often struck that the tower was abandoned. In 1826, the same house in Wethersfield, Connecticut, was struck twice in an interval of only two or three days. In Boston, the same people (Hollis-street church) has been struck repeatedly. On the 20th of April, 1793, the lightning fell three times in twenty minutes on the building of Notre Dame de Nam. On the night of the 14th of April, 1718, twenty-four steeples were struck along the coast of Brittany; and on the 11th of January, 1815, twelve steeples suffered a similar fate in the Rhine provinces. In 1782 a German meteorologist found that, within the period of three years, 350 steeples had been struck, and 121 ringers killed.

Prof. Levering remarks that there is a great difference of exposure observable in various localities, and that fatality of single strokes is not so common as that of multiple strokes. In 1855, only one individual is known to have been killed by lightning in France. In 1767, twenty-four steeples were struck, and sixteen killed. In 1819, twenty-nine individuals have been killed and eight steeples struck. On the 15th of February, 1779, all the inhabitants of a town in Cornwall, who were in church, were thrown to the ground.

Some very singular freaks of lightning have been observed in recent storms; but they are no new tricks of this mysterious agency. Mention is made of the fact that a pin in the hair has been melted, when the hair was not signed. When lightning falls among a crowd, it appears sometimes to seek out some individuals, and to avoid others. Color has some influence. Three cases are described, in which horses had all their white hair singed off, while the rest were left. When the theatre of Nantes was struck on the 20th of March, 1784, the electricity melted ear-rings and watch keys, without injuring those who wore them. On the 15th of November, 1755, a magazine near Rouen was struck and two casks of powder scattered without being ignited. At Partington an iron bar, one inch in thickness, was diminished to the size of a small wire by being struck.

In 1717, the steeple of St. Mark in Venice, was struck by lightning and burned. It was rebuilt, and again reduced to ashes in 1489. It was afterwards built of stone, and was again struck in 1748. In 1759, lightning burnt all the wood work of the roof of the Cathedral of Strasburg. It was proposed to place conductors upon it, but there was some objection on account of the expense. In 1833 it was struck three times within a quarter of an hour, and so damaged that the repairs cost six millions of dollars. There was still some hesitation in regard to lightning rods, when it was struck upon it in 1845, at an expense of only $3000. On the 10th of July, 1843, was struck twice, but the rods saved it. On the 15th of August, 1769, the tower of St. Nazaire, at Brescia, was struck, and the subterranean powder magazine, containing 2,076,000 pounds of powder, was exploded. One-sixth of the whole tower was blown in ruins. Three thousand persons perished. The property destroyed amounted to two millions of ducats.

Physical Pain of Death.
A paragraph going the rounds of the papers giving the opinion of Lord Bacon and others, that the pain of hanging is inconceivable. It is asserted, for example, that after a momentary feeling of suffocation, bright colors dance before the eyes, and stretch away into vistas of indescribable loveliness. There is no reason to doubt the truth of this declaration, because numerous instances have occurred of persons being cut down before life was extinct; and it was on the authority of well-authenticated examples of this character that Lord Bacon and others founded their opinion. Moreover, hanging, in its effect on the human organism, produces results very similar to those produced by some natural diseases, so that this also affords a criterion for judging. In cases of drowning, like wise, the testimony is universal that the physical pain on the moment of consciousness being lost, is quite inconceivable. The same phenomena of notes, stars and beautiful lights dancing before the eyes has often been mentioned by individuals restored after apparent death by drowning.

It is nearly certain—indeed, as certain as anything in the speculative sciences, that in all deaths the physical suffering is small. Even where invalids experience the most excruciating agony during the progress of the disease, nature comes to their relief at the last hour, and life goes out quietly, like a candle in its stick. Those who have witnessed death have most frequently, especially if they have been intelligent persons, and therefore capable of judging, agree generally in considering the physical pain of death as inconceivable. They say that the convulsive motions which frequently attend the parting breath, are not evidence of suffering, for that the invalid is insensible. They say also, that when the senses are retained, there is usually no such spasm. A leading medical authority states that scarcely one person in fifty is sensible at the point of death; and some physicians assert that they have never seen a death-bed in which the patient was sensible. As life falls, nature, it would seem, has its own way of relieving the sensibility of the nerves, and other wise preparing the individual for the great and inevitable change.

These facts should teach all men, while yet in health, "to put their houses in order." Many a father, by neglecting to make a will, or keep his business always arranged, has left his family in a state of confusion, or entangled in the severest losses. Few are those comparatively who, on a sick bed, have sufficient clearance of intellect left to adjust entangled affairs, provide for the contingencies of trade, or even direct wisely the distribution of their estates. Death usually comes rapidly in the case of a short disease, leaving time for nothing but a wild and hopeless struggle with the enemy. Or it comes so insidiously as to beguile the victim into his friend's arms to the last hour, with the hope of recovery, or at least of months of prolonged life. Men dread sudden death, and pray to be delivered from it, forgetting that, to most of us, death is always sudden, coming as Scripture truly says, "like a thief in the night." It is not for its physical pain that men should fear death, but lest it should overtake them ere they have "settled their house in order." To leaving a family unprotected for, or to have put off arrangements for settling up one's affairs, is the real pang of death.

THE SAN FRANCISCO VIGILANCE COMMITTEE
THE SAN FRANCISCO VIGILANCE COMMITTEE, organized by the Vigilance Committee, has just issued a circular, in which it is stated that the committee will not, as a body, favor either Democrats or Republicans. From this, the natural inference is that the committee is a Know Nothing concern.

A ROARING FOUNTAIN.—The highest fountain in the world is on the grounds of the Duke of Devonshire, in England, where a single jet is thrown up to a height of 267 feet—more than 100 feet higher than Niagara Falls. The height is reserved which supplies it, is 359 feet above the level of the sea.

SCIENCE.—For all practical purposes true science is a thorough knowledge of a man's own business. And a farmer who knows how to make the most profit with the least amount of labor and capital, who understands how to make the most of his land without impoverishing it, but rather continually improving it, is truly scientific.

THE AFFAIR OF HONOR IN CHARLESTON.
The Charleston papers published the following correspondence which took place between the parties of this unfortunate affair. The undersigned deem it their duty to lay before the community, through the press of the city, with a view to a just understanding of the late hostile difficulty between Mr. Edward Magrath and Mr. William B. Taber, Jr., the following correspondence and statement.

The annexed communication was handed to Mr. Taber on Sunday afternoon, the 27th inst., Mr. James Conner, who bore it, not having met him the day previous.

To John Heart, Esq., and W. B. Taber, Jr., Esq., Editors of the Charleston Mercury.

GENTLEMEN:—You have, after repeated threatenings and with deliberation published and circulated insulting and libellous attacks upon my brother Judge Magrath. To effect this you have put aside the habitual propriety of a Charleston newspaper; and, disregarding the taste and sentiment of the community, have emulated the corruption and licentiousness of a vulgar press elsewhere.

You have done this without provocation or the excuse of excitement, and in the face of relations with Judge Magrath, proving upon both of you personal estimates of him in private exactly the reverse of those you have endorsed and published. Herein is the proof of your delinquency, either in your private intercourse or in your public conduct. You have, it is true, attempted to interpose the protection and veil of an anonymous correspondent; this could not serve you in any event. In your seeming anxiety to secure it, you have, by an apologetic paragraph, in your own names as Editors, endorsed the libel I am thus relieved of all questions as to whom I should address myself. You know, in attacking one exercising judicial functions, that, as to him, you would be exempt from the personal accountability I claim at your hands. You will not doubt my right to do so. How far your supposed security may have sharpened the malice and stimulated the audacity of the attack, I will not now surmise, because the intent of this communication is to afford you the opportunity of proving whether you did or did not calculate upon such immunity, and to demand the satisfaction recognized in such cases. I invite you solemnly to a meeting, and refer you for the necessary arrangements, to my friend James Conner, Esq., who will hand you this.

I am your obedient servant,
E. MAGRATH.
CHARLESTON, Sept. 27th, 1856.

SIR:—I have received by the hands of Mr. Conner, your note of the 26th inst. I repeat your assertion, that I have made "repeated threatenings to publish and circulate" "insulting and libellous attacks upon your 'brother, Judge Magrath,' and deny that the Mercury has 'endorsed' the publication made. It has on the contrary, simultaneously with the publication of these articles, proffered its columns for reply.

Before I take notice of the simple personal aspects of your note to myself, I have a word to say, touching its bearings to me, as the conductor of a public press, its relation to Judge Magrath, and the party who has given the cause of offence, for which you seek revenge. You are an intruder, and you intrude to commit an outrage upon the highest public trusts. You assume to represent the honor and manhood of your brother, an avowed candidate for the highest office in our gift, and by your interference, to reduce his honor and manhood to a precarious existence. I do not admit, that, when a candidate by his own consent, he can resign the proper responsibility of this position, and become a candidate. He cannot legitimately put his character in commission, and maintain honor by proxy. If he can resign his seat to go into Congress, he can resign it (if necessary), to vindicate his honor. He has no right to be a candidate, if he is to cease to be a man. The shelter of his judicial office is without the countenance of principle. It is a refuge without manhood and without character. But truth shall not be muzzled, though he be a Judge, and the "liberty of the press" shall be maintained, even against the "vicious" champions of his manhood, and the intrusive representatives of his honor. Thus much for your warrant to insult me, and to represent your brother. But you have insulted me, and you shall not do so with impunity.

Protesting, therefore, against your right to call upon me, either as man or editor, your right to assume your brother's proper responsibility, your attempt to stifle by the press the freedom of discussion, I nevertheless waive all this, and consent to meet you. My friend, Mr. Burnett, will make the necessary arrangements.

Your obedient servant,
W. B. TABER, JR.
E. MAGRATH, Esq.

Huntsville—Its Schools and Improvements.—On a recent visit to Huntsville, we were much gratified to find that the Female College, of that place was in a highly prosperous condition, having already, thus early in the session, about 140 pupils, and daily increasing. There are in the College a number of pupils from this and adjoining Counties, and also from Georgia, Tennessee and Mississippi. President Everhart and his estimable lady seem eminently qualified for their stations in every department. He not only sustains himself, but does so with increasing popularity. We again wish this Female College success, and heartily and cordially commend it to the confidence and patronage of our friends in this section of the State.

Huntsville is not only maintaining its well deserved reputation for refined, friendly and affable society, and neat, tasty improvement, but many new private buildings are going up, and some very extensive public buildings, connected with the Rail

Road depot, designed for car houses, machine shops, &c. Improvements are also being made in the extensive water works, and pipes laid down to light the city with gas.

Mr. Fillmore.

It sometimes happens, that persons tell the truth without intending it, while they at the same time make pretensions to virtues, political or personal, to which they cannot justly lay the slightest claim. In one of Mr. Fillmore's speeches, which has been highly lauded by the Know Nothing papers, he said he knew "no East, no West, no North, and no South." This we believe is strictly and emphatically true.

He does not know then in a proper sense

Mr. Fillmore's Prospects.

Election have been held in nine States this Fall, six of which, Kentucky, N. Carolina, Missouri, Alabama, Arkansas & Texas, having 48 electoral votes, have gone for Mr. Buchanan, and three Iowa, Vermont and Maine, having 17 votes, have gone for Freemont, leaving for Mr. Fillmore, 20011 and yet his friends say that his prospects are bright and brightening, about we suppose as those of the boy with the birds, who said he would have one when he got another.

The attention of the citizens of Alexandria and vicinity, and all who trade to that point, is invited to the advertisement of R. M. Dickson, who has recently received his new stock of Fall and Winter Goods.

It is only necessary to inform the citizens of that region, that new goods have been received by that well known house, to assure them that nothing will be wanting to accommodate them both in the price and quality of goods.

GREAT BARGAINS OFFERED. The well known firm of Stipes & Rowland, are now offering a great variety of excellent Goods at excessively low prices, in order to make room for another and more extensive stock.

Those who wish to get good bargains, can doubtless be suited in style and quality, out of their extensive stock, and ought not to let the opportunity pass unimproved.

COMMUNION HOUSE IN MOBILE.—Attention is respectfully invited to the card of Marrast & Lee, in another column. The Rail Road is coming, and it is time for our Planters to begin to make up their acquaintance with the business men of our own excellent commercial mart. Than this House, there is none perhaps more worthy and reliable in the southern country.

Death of William R. Taber, Jr.

It is our duty to announce the death of WILLIAM R. TABER, Jr., one of the Editors of this paper, who fell yesterday afternoon, at the third fire, in a duel with EDWARD MAGRATH, Esq., in consequence of the peremptory challenge of the latter for the publication of alleged offensive matter in this paper, the author of which was not called for. The communication complained of, the reference the candidacy for Congress of Hon. A. G. MAGRATH. It is not now that we are called upon to pursue the merits of the question involved. In the presence of death, the death of one who has been intimately associated with us for years, and who breathed as true a heart as ever beat on the soil of Carolina, we bow our heads in sorrow and in suffering, and pass by all considerations of party conflict, in the sense that we have lost a friend, true and tried, and a brother in the hard duties that make up our connection with the public life.

It will not be easy to find a braver and more self-sacrificing spirit—it will not be often that the community will be called upon to mourn over the extinction of a more brilliant and generous intellect.—Chas. McR.

Court of Probate for Benton

County, Alabama, Special Term,

Oct. 8, A. D. 1856.

THIS day came John N. McCall, Administrator of the Estate of Robert McCall, deceased, and filed his written petition in Court, praying an order and decree of said Court for the sale of the following described tract of Land, belonging to the estate of his intestate, known and distinguished as the south west fourth of the north west fourth, and north west fourth of the southwest fourth of section 29, of Township 15 of Range 5 east, lying and being situated in Benton County, Alabama, for a more equal, fair, and beneficial division amongst the heirs of said estate, alleging that an equal, fair and beneficial division of the above described Tract of Land cannot be made, amongst the heirs and distributees of said estate, without a sale of the same.

It is therefore ordered by the court, that Thursday the 24th day of November next be set apart for the hearing and determining upon said petition, and that notice thereof be given by publication in the Jacksonville Republican, a newspaper printed and published in for forty days, prior to said day, as a notice to all persons concerned, to be and appear at a special term said petition if they think proper.

CASTLES IN THE AIR.
Farwell, my castle, raised to light Farwell, ye towers of beauty
From your summit I must fly
To sober paths of duty
All many an hour could I employ These lovely towers adorning Till every airy ball of joy
Should sweep a state of morning
But, go, vain dreams, depart Though fondly I loved, I feel
That while you soothe the heart
From better things you steal it.

When rose the storm of grief and care
On life's uncertain billow
I sought my castle in the air
And found a ready pillow Here joys to come were always shown,
The present grief dispelling
For future weal is all unknown
In my aerial dwelling
The lesson that was taught
To show the tempest-tossed
A refuge sure in heaven!

Here Hope, though cheated over and over I thought would dwell secure;
And deemed, of all her various store,
This gift the best and surest White fancy strove, with magic glass,
To raise the scene ideal Still wishing Hope—Though, this may be true, it will surely be real!

Thus many a darling theme Was forming and undoing,
But still, a brighter dream Arose upon the ruin.

Thus, in the fields of wild romance,
I tarried for a season;
But still, at every change and chance,
I heard the voice of reason
Of some better happier scene Devote thy thoughts so ranging Whose base is truth and love divine,
Its fabric never changing Thy hopes through youth and age,
If thou wilt thither guide them,
Though tempest rise and rage,
Securely shall abide them.

I raised my eyes from all beneath,
And, in the distance
She held an amaranthine wreath,
And a promise immortal
I felt the scene before my view
Was more than idle seeming And wished and strove to bid adieu
To all my days of dreaming
Then, go, vain dreams, depart!
Though fondly loved, I feel
That while you soothe the heart
From better things you steal it.

DISCOURAGEMENTS.
From the American Union.
BY MARTIN A. AVERY.

Harry Grove was a good looking tall, and respectable young farmer, with a handsome house, nice farm, with beautiful orchard and garden, and plenty of fine fat cattle and horses; but with all these advantages he was the baseliest fellow in town. He knew his own interest in a bargain; the value of his estate and his craps; and the respective merits of all the more celebrated preachers, and politicians in the land, much better than he did his own. For he was continually understanding himself, and his advantages, and diffidence in society, were often leading him into some laughable blunder, that would crimson his face with shame, until it resembled a penny, or a pickled beet.

Now, it is his young and pretty sister, not at all afflicted in this way, and numberless were the times when she had striven by encouragement, and reproach, entreaty and advice, to overcome this disagreeable habit in her brother, but all to no purpose; for Harry would be awkward Harry still. And she was in continual dread whenever they went into society together, that he would get tripped up with the carpet, upset a lamp, spill lemonade upon some lady's dress, or carve the goose into her lap, or something else as ridiculous.

Tired at last of reasoning and ridiculing, Hattie began to philosophize in silence.
She watched him narrowly for some time in this way, and at last became convinced that he got along very well except in the presence of Sarah Harper, one of the prettiest and most popular belles in the village, for whom he had a strong preference.
Hattie thought she discovered symptoms of regard on her part, of quite as decided a character; although it had sometimes seemed to her delight to ridicule and torment him.

"Now if I could only convince him of this, that with all his awkwardness he has won the love of the only woman he ever loved, and his awkwardness, and diffidence good than anything else I can imagine," thought Hattie. "He would certainly be glad to appreciate himself more highly, and in the end get rid of this nightmare of bashfulness."

Now after Hattie came to this conclusion, Sarah Harper received a letter that surprised her not a little, and sent the hot blood to her cheeks. It was from Hattie.
"Dear Miss Harper: Knowing as you must the disadvantages under which I labor in addressing you, I hope you will pardon my writing in preference to doing so personally. I have long loved you better than the whole world besides; and the fear of your scorn, and ridicule, has done more towards making me appear the awkward fool I am not, than anything else. In the universal, you may not believe this, but it is true; and it is also true, that with your smiles, and encouraging words, I should be a very different man. Oh, will you not say these words dear Sarah! Will you not write, and tell me I do not love in vain, and that the hitherto unquarable diffidence I have ever displayed in your presence, has not disgusted you, just redemption, with my name and character.

Yours, &c., HARRY GROVE.

A few mornings after this note had been received by Miss Harper, Harry and his sister were sitting at the breakfast table when one of the servants brought a package of letters and papers from the office of which—

"What a letter!" he opened hastily, and began to read. "As he did so, his face crimsoned, and getting up in the greatest agitation he began to pace the floor."
"Why Harry! what on earth is the matter? you look as if you were going into a hysteric fit," said the mischievous girl with mock solemnity. "Come now, tell me, is it a love letter, or something else more mysterious and terrible?" And seizing her opportunity, the laughing girl caught it from his hand and fled from the room and on the broad staircase.

Harry followed with all speed; but with
